May 30, 2008

Dear Friends:

We are pleased to send you a copy of the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies 2007 Annual Report, highlighting lessons learned and new directions. In two short years, we will be celebrating our 40th Anniversary and we are excited about sharing our new approaches, collaborative partnerships, and commitment to a better America.

The Joint Center’s knowledge and critical thinking will continue to take center stage in policy deliberations at all levels of government. Today, we are engaged in the search for real world solutions to pressing social and economic problems. Relying on past, present and future supporters, we know the Joint Center will contribute in transformative ways towards a brighter future for us all.

Thank you for your continuing support.

Best regards,

Ralph B. Everett
President and CEO
TABLE OF CONTENTS

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>About the Joint Center</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Leadership</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>History</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Looking Forward</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Black Elected Officials</td>
<td>8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A Shared Commitment</td>
<td>10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gathering Storm</td>
<td>14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Diversity Cure</td>
<td>16</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Place Matters</td>
<td>18</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Publications</td>
<td>20</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Board of Governors</td>
<td>22</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Joint Center Team</td>
<td>23</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Contributors</td>
<td>24</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Founded in 1970, the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies is one of the nation’s premier policy and research institutions, and the only such institution focusing primarily on the concerns of African Americans and other people of color. Established to encourage black political participation and to meet the needs of black elected officials, the Joint Center has played an influential role in shaping local, state, and national policy. Since that time, it has helped the number of black elected officials grow nationally from fewer than 1,500 to more than 10,000.

Today, the Joint Center continues to focus on improving the socioeconomic status of African Americans and other people of color through its contributions of high quality research and informed analysis to critical policy debates. Elected and appointed officials at all levels of government, as well as other organizations, look to the Joint Center for its input and advice on a wide range of issues, as well as its assistance in better understanding the black electorate and the concerns of their constituents.

In conducting research and policy analysis and in disseminating the information it produces, the Joint Center employs a nonpartisan approach to building partnerships and coalitions across government and the policy development community in order to broaden and strengthen the impact of its work.

“...LEADING THE WAY TO A MORE PROMISING AMERICA FOR ALL PEOPLE—
RELENTLESSLY EXPLORING POLICY OPTIONS AND INSPIRING ACTION AT ALL LEVELS OF SOCIETY— IS A CHARGE THAT THE JOINT CENTER MUST AND WILL KEEP.”

RALPH B. EVERETT, PRESIDENT AND CEO, JCPEs
Along with its rich history and legacy of success in cultivating social change, the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies continues to carry the weight of responsibility to help our great nation achieve its essential promise of equal justice under law.

The fundamental idea that has sustained the Joint Center over the past 37 years—and which continues to invigorate our sense of purpose today—is centered on the resolve that African Americans will be the authors, and not the victims, of events. Over the years, this organization has nurtured the wide expansion of black representation and galvanized the body politic with a sense of mission and purpose on a range of social and economic issues critical to bringing equity, opportunity and collective responsibility to all.

To be sure, other voices for change have brought great progress. However, new and evermore daunting challenges have emerged, and with them new obligations for the Joint Center to strengthen the policy process with a fresh perspective and to inform the national debate with heightened urgency, new ideas and solutions.

There has never been a more critical time for “America’s premier black think tank” to be a force for change—and to re-tool and revitalize the Joint Center for the tasks ahead. I know I speak for every member of the Board of Governors when I say that we are committed to that goal. We are proud to be policy leaders who facilitate the beneficent programmatic research thrust of this great organization.

To propel the historic dream of justice, equality and opportunity for all people. The time is right to carry our legacy forward with a renewed energy. Today, African Americans are more influential now than ever before in Congress, state houses, and local governments across the country. Businesses and civic organizations are showing new resolve in confronting many of the entrenched social problems that have blocked our fellow citizens from pursuing the American Dream. The electorate is crying out for new ideas and movement in new directions. Our goal is to generate these ideas and propel solutions.

As the Joint Center moves forward with a strategic focus on spurring innovation, generating policy options and promoting leadership on issues that matter most to our nation, we will strengthen and expand our network of scholars and experts. Building on the establishment and subsequent achievements of our Health Policy Institute, we have a model for creating additional core institutes to serve as centers of excellence that will drive policy development in three arenas—media and technology, civic engagement and governance, and education and workforce opportunity.

We have charted a new course on such critical issues as climate change, health equity, and mortgage lending practices, among others having profound effects on communities across this nation. The Joint Center is committed to ensuring that all Americans, especially African Americans and other people of color, are engaged and their interests are well represented whenever agendas are created, policies are established and laws are written.

In this exciting era of change and possibility, the Joint Center is responding to seismic shifts in the way the world works—adapting, innovating—but always within the context of our knowledge and critical thinking that will shape the solutions leading to real world impacts.
he Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies was created in 1970 to lend a hand to African American leaders as they traveled the uncharted road from civil rights activism to mainstream American politics. Its most prominent founders were Dr. Kenneth Clark, a renowned social psychologist, and Louis Martin, the legendary newspaper editor who had become a key presidential adviser on issues affecting black America.

As the heir to a rich legacy of activists and scholars—from the early abolitionists to the civil rights leaders—the nonpartisan Joint Center began its work with an emphasis on translating hard-won voting rights into practical improvements through political empowerment. Coming in the wake of the social turmoil of the late 1960s, its founders established it as an apostle of the nation’s political system, heralding it as the best way for black people to achieve racial equality.

Known initially as the Joint Center for Political Studies, the organization set down to work at a time when black politicians were just beginning to expand black representation on school boards, city councils and in state legislatures around the country—and when the total number of black elected officials numbered fewer than 1,500. By creating a reliable foundation of information, technical assistance and networking activities, the Joint Center sought to strengthen the capacity of this emerging political class to further their influence within the system, as well as their own effectiveness to bring lasting improvements to the communities they represented.

Throughout the 1970s, the Joint Center built upon this foundation and set into motion other organizations such as the National Conference of Black Mayors and the National Conference of Black State Legislators. It sponsored seminars and technical assistance programs for elected officials, emerging politicians and other civil leaders. It became the nation’s foremost authority on the African American electorate and its elected leadership, regularly publishing the National Roster of Black Elected Officials and important guidebooks on black politics that are distributed at the major party conventions.

As it matured, and under the leadership of longtime President Eddie Williams, the Joint Center sought to expand its focus beyond political training and into the world of policy research, ideas and debate—in fact, to become a first-rate think tank with a focus on the concerns of African Americans and other people of color. Williams himself defined the organization’s aim as follows: “to identify public policy issues that have implications for black Americans...to be both a center for intellectual discovery and a wellspring of practical political knowledge.”

In 1990, the Joint Center added a word to its name, becoming the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies. A new, heightened focus on social and economic issues was suited to the concerns of an emerging group of politicians who now represented racially diverse districts and, while still concerned about protecting civil rights, were also concerned about the bread and butter issues plaguing impoverished neighborhoods.

To that end, the Joint Center has worked to develop the capacity to produce reliable research and public policy analyses, yielding data that could be used by all politicians and policymakers to help all America in dealing with the issues of race, poverty and disadvantage.

Today, with the number of black elected officials having grown over 10,000 nationwide, the Joint Center looks to its future as an essential resource for elected officials and other policymakers as they seek to identify and address America’s key social and economic challenges—even mindful of its historic mission and its longstanding commitment to strengthen America’s commitment to justice and equal opportunity for all.
New Approaches, Core Values: Strategies for the Future

The Joint Center has worked to ensure equal access to opportunity and create lasting social and economic gains for African Americans by promoting and expanding black political participation. By means of policy relevant research and analysis, the Center has strengthened its support and outreach to an ever-growing number of black elected officials at all levels of government.

These elected officials have helped to eliminate egregious vestiges of segregation and inequality in the United States, thereby securing dramatic improvements in the individual life circumstances of many African Americans. Nevertheless, far too many still face racial discrimination and other roadblocks to realizing the American Dream. Members of low-income communities of color continue to confront the serious problems of unemployment and economic insecurity, crime ridden neighborhoods, health disparities, and seriously under-funded schools. At a time when the challenges spurred by globalization are growing in complexity for all Americans, especially disadvantaged people of color, the Joint Center is strategically reorganizing into core Institutes. Building on the success of the Health Policy Institute (HPI), there will be centers of excellence in four key policy areas.

Looking Forward

• Optimizing health care access and quality; and
• Creating conditions for healthy aging.

The Joint Center Health Policy Institute

HPI was launched six years ago to play a leadership role in reframing policy debates on health and refocusing attention on dangerous disparities. Our research and analysis is helping to generate new policy recommendations and provide solutions for longstanding health equity concerns. In an era of soaring health care costs, state budget constraints and an enormous national deficit, we need a renewed commitment to addressing existing health disparities. Focus areas include:

• Identifying and addressing the many determinants that can improve health outcomes;
• Increasing resources for prevention;
• Informing policy and practices aimed at reducing infant mortality and improving maternal and child health;
• Reducing risk factors and supporting healthy behaviors among children and youth;
• Improving mental health and reducing factors that promote violence;
• Optimizing health care access and quality; and
• Creating conditions for healthy aging.

The Joint Center Media and Technology Institute

Through this Institute, the Joint Center will focus on the media and higher technology’s evolving role in increasing political participation, economic advancement, and social well-being among African Americans. The Institute will work with a diverse community of experts, including scholars, industry representatives, public officials and consumers, to make contributions to cutting-edge research, publications, information portals, and policy debates on this important topic. Areas of focus will include:

• Improving access to information and technology;
• Identifying important “new media” issues: private ownership, concentrated media ownership and the impact of the quality of programming;
• Providing recommendations for reform in business practice and public policy to government and industry decisionmakers;
• Promoting awareness of media sources; and
• Assessing the effects of convergence on old and new media.

The Joint Center Civic Engagement and Governance Institute

This Institute will strengthen the Joint Center’s long-held tradition of energizing political participation and increasing public policy awareness. Research will examine relevant developments in the public, private and non-profit sectors and their effects on African Americans and other people of color. Focus areas will include:

• Strengthening the National Policy Alliance and leadership skills of black elected officials;
• Building coalitions with other organizations that represent black elected officials;
• Analyzing African American political participation and enforcement of voting rights statutes;
• Conducting polls of African Americans to determine public policy issues of significance;
• Supporting emerging leaders; and
• Maintaining a roster of all black elected officials.

The Joint Center Education Policy and Opportunity Institute

Given that African Americans are more likely than others to suffer higher rates of poverty, unemployment, and enrollment in failing schools, this Institute will focus on education and workforce development. Cutting-edge research and analysis will help uncover new ways to advance greater equality in educational opportunities and workforce options. Priority will be given to developing creative proposals for improving schools and job prospects for young African Americans. Critical issues include:

• Reforming education policy and economic opportunity for children and youth;
• Promoting asset-building;
• Examining the effects of any and all Social Security reform proposals on retirement security;
• Ensuring that workforce development is aimed at matching skill development to business needs;
• Fostering racial equity in regional development; and
• Increasing access to affordable housing.

Given the magnitude of the challenges to be met, we need a renewed commitment to addressing existing health disparities. Focus areas include:

• Identifying and addressing the many determinants that can improve health outcomes;
• Increasing resources for prevention;
• Informing policy and practices aimed at reducing infant mortality and improving maternal and child health;
• Reducing risk factors and supporting healthy behaviors among children and youth;
• Improving mental health and reducing factors that promote violence;
• Optimizing health care access and quality; and
• Creating conditions for healthy aging.

The Joint Center Civic Engagement and Governance Institute

This Institute will strengthen the Joint Center’s long-held tradition of energizing political participation and increasing public policy awareness. Research will examine relevant developments in the public, private and non-profit sectors and their effects on African Americans and other people of color. Focus areas will include:

• Strengthening the National Policy Alliance and leadership skills of black elected officials;
• Building coalitions with other organizations that represent black elected officials;
• Analyzing African American political participation and enforcement of voting rights statutes;
• Conducting polls of African Americans to determine public policy issues of significance;
• Supporting emerging leaders; and
• Maintaining a roster of all black elected officials.

The Joint Center Education Policy and Opportunity Institute

Given that African Americans are more likely than others to suffer higher rates of poverty, unemployment, and enrollment in failing schools, this Institute will focus on education and workforce development. Cutting-edge research and analysis will help uncover new ways to advance greater equality in educational opportunities and workforce options. Priority will be given to developing creative proposals for improving schools and job prospects for young African Americans. Critical issues include:

• Reforming education policy and economic opportunity for children and youth;
• Promoting asset-building;
• Examining the effects of any and all Social Security reform proposals on retirement security;
• Ensuring that workforce development is aimed at matching skill development to business needs;
• Fostering racial equity in regional development; and
• Increasing access to affordable housing.
BLACK ELECTED OFFICIALS

An interview with The Honorable Johnny Ford, Mayor of Tuskegee, Alabama and Co-Chair of the Joint Center’s National Policy Alliance

How would you describe the state of African-American youth today?

While we can be proud of the enormous progress that has been made over the past half-century in clearing the way for the advancement of our young people, it is clear that an enormous number of young African Americans—mostly males—are in crisis. For too many, there is no path to a decent, prosperous and rewarding life. Too many are falling off the edge into a downward spiral that they will never recover from.

What are the indicators of this crisis?

Well, for one thing, one in every eight black males in their twenties is in prison or jail. More than 60% of the people in prison are now racial and ethnic minorities. As long as children in communities of color are facing these kinds of odds, we are a long way from being able to build hope and channel their energies toward positive outcomes.

Why is this happening? Are there causes and/or aggravating factors that you feel can be addressed?

Yes, though some are more difficult than others to mitigate—for instance, the lack of a father in the home, lack of community support and the lack of positive role models—in fact, the perpetuation of negative stereotypes—in the popular media. But there are also many factors that are a result of public policy—factors that contribute to this cycle and make the problem much harder to deal with over the long term. For example, there is the disproportionate impact of the “war on drugs,” in which three-fourths of all persons in prison for drug offenses are people of color. Some of our education policies have turned our schools into pipelines for the prisons.

What do you mean? What are these public policy issues and other factors that need to be addressed?

Many of them were pointed out by the Dellums Commission, which was convened by the Joint Center’s Health Policy Institute. I’m talking about things such as zero-tolerance policies in schools that are resulting in excessive expulsions among African American males. I’m talking about judicial policies that allow juveniles to face criminal infractions in adult courts with subsequent detention in adult facilities. On top of this, there is the failure to address dwindling economic and job opportunities for minorities. As long as children in communities of color are facing these kinds of odds, we are a long way from being able to build hope and channel their energies toward positive outcomes.

What role do you see the Joint Center playing in all of this?

As an incubator for ideas and policy solutions—and as a catalyst in bringing policymakers together to focus on our most pressing challenges—the Joint Center can help point the way toward real-world solutions with practical applications for ensuring that the current generation of African American youth, and those who follow, are able to realize their full economic and social potential and become productive citizens.

When you spend six times the rate on the penal system versus what we spend on higher education, it becomes clear we have a problem. Only when we shift our priorities from punishment to education are we going to get a handle on this problem. We can do that with the right policy approach. We cannot give up on our youth.

How would you address the disproportionate impact of the “war on drugs” and the disproportionate percentage of the black male population in jail?

That is one of the most urgent and important tasks that we have. We cannot give up on our youth. We need a strong policy foundation from which to help young African Americans rise to their future. The Joint Center played an important role in creating a number of key organizations representing black elected and appointed officials. Today, all the organizations representing black public officials are members of the National Policy Alliance, of which the Joint Center serves as convener. These organizations are:

The Congressional Black Caucus
The National Black Caucus of State Legislators (NBCSL)
The National Association of Black County Officials (NABCO)
The National Conference of Black Mayors (NCBM)
The National Black Caucus of Local Elected Officials (NBCELO)
The World Conference of Mayors (WCM)
The National Black Caucus of School Board Members (NBCSBM)
The Judicial Council of the National Bar Association
Blacks In Government (BIG)
The first thing we can do is take the powerful documentation by the Dellums Commission of the undeniable costs of these systemic failures and begin to shift our focus to the costs of success. In state after state, taxpayers and elected officials squirm when their prison budgets surpass and then cannibalize their education budgets, yet they act as if they have no choice. This is surely one of the best examples of taking failure to scale and paying for it dearly. To fulfill the promise our country was founded on we must take a different path and take our profound belief in equal opportunity to scale. If taking failure to scale is not a sustainable strategy, now is the time to get serious about the costs of success. For example, if we know that at least half of the achievement gap in today’s 12th graders was already there when they entered first grade, we need to know what it would cost to have all of our 5-year-olds entering kindergarten ready to be successful in school. If an 8-year-old’s ability to read and do basic math is a predictor of high school graduation, we should be asking what it will take to have all our children successful by third grade.

Added to the economic deprivation, inadequate education and poor health trajectories facing so many young people of color is racism. Racism and its consequences are too often the underlying factors that systematically thwart not only the life dreams and chances of young African Americans, but also those of their families, communities and ultimately our nation. As Martin Luther King, Jr. never ceased to remind us, “our destinies—both morally and practically—are inextricably linked.” What will it take to turn around the trends like the disproportionate representation of black males in the juvenile and criminal justice system? What will it take to address the increasing numbers of black females being incarcerated and placed on probation? What will it take to increase the presence of black males on college and university campuses?

The Dellums Commission report from the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies affirmed and re-awakened many about the status of today’s young African Americans, particularly young men. It is alarmingly clear that far too many face dashed dreams and diminishing life prospects. We can no longer take for granted that these young people will surpass or even equal their parents in educational, job and economic achievements. For the first time in American history, it is no longer a given that younger generations will have as promising a chance at realizing the American dream as that afforded their parents’ or even their grandparents’ generations.

There is much to be done to address the challenges that thwart life dreams and chances of young African Americans. The W.K. Kellogg Foundation is committed to confronting these challenges, starting with concerted efforts to promote the health, well-being and education of vulnerable children and youth, improving family income and assets, and community assets, and increasing civic and philanthropic engagement. And overarching all these efforts, the foundation has dedicated itself to promoting racial equity and working against the forces of laissez-faire and structural racism that persist in our society so that all children will thrive.

Added to the economic deprivation, inadequate education and poor health trajectories facing so many young people of color is racism. Racism and its consequences are too often the underlying factors that systematically thwart not only the life dreams and chances of young African Americans, but also those of their families, communities and ultimately our nation. As Martin Luther King, Jr. never ceased to remind us, “our destinies—both morally and practically—are inextricably linked.” What will it take to turn around the trends like the disproportionate representation of black males in the juvenile and criminal justice system? What will it take to address the increasing numbers of black females being incarcerated and placed on probation? What will it take to increase the presence of black males on college and university campuses?

There is much to be done to address the challenges that thwart life dreams and chances of young African Americans. The W.K. Kellogg Foundation is committed to confronting these challenges, starting with concerted efforts to promote the health, well-being and education of vulnerable children and youth, improving family income and assets, and community assets, and increasing civic and philanthropic engagement. And overarching all these efforts, the foundation has dedicated itself to promoting racial equity and working against the forces of laissez-faire and structural racism that persist in our society so that all children will thrive.

As the Foundation works to assure broad public engagement in policy deliberations and a shared commitment to viable solutions, we look to the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies as a champion for bold investments in the success of our next generation, and as a strategic partner with accurate and timely information to inform policymakers and to spur the civic engagement essential in propelling vulnerable children toward success.
Like any large membership and advocacy organization, AARP has a keen interest in what’s on the minds of its members and the public at large. “This is especially true when Presidential and Congressional elections loom,” says CEO Bill Novelli, “and this certainly includes the views of our organization’s large number of African American members.”

“We are committed to providing a voice for millions of Americans concerned about affordable, quality health care and lifetime financial security,” says Novelli. “Our two million African American members care deeply about these public policy matters, both for themselves and future generations.”

Focusing on these issues of critical importance to people age 50+, AARP has launched a non-partisan national movement, Divided We Fail, the goal of which is to make sure that the next President and Congress work together to ensure that all Americans have access to affordable, quality health care and the opportunity to attain long-term financial security.

“No matter who wins in November, we will have a new president with a mandate to address these issues,” Novelli says. “Success will depend on the ability to bring together all Americans, and the aspirations and anxieties of African Americans must be understood by our leaders so that we can move forward united.”

In this period leading up to the election, AARP has been working closely with the Joint Center to better understand the views of African American voters. The organizations collaborated on two crucial polls in 2007—one of South Carolina’s African American voters, the other of African American voters nationwide on the eve of the first presidential primaries and caucuses. Both surveys assessed the attitudes of likely black voters on candidates and issues.

The polls revealed that even prior to the official start of the nominating process, black voters were highly engaged in the campaigns and focused on the issues. Media reports extensively cited these survey results. Novelli says the findings offered his organization unparalleled insight into the views of African Americans, particularly on AARP’s signature issues.

“The Joint Center’s nearly 40-year history of trusted research helped us focus attention on African American voters and strengthened our assertion that politicians must address their health and financial security concerns,” says Novelli. “Opinion leaders, policymakers and the media recognize the Joint Center’s credibility and take its findings seriously.”

Novelli acknowledges the numerous benefits that arose out of this collaborative survey research. “Working with the Joint Center has been deeply productive. In the coming years, we expect to strengthen the ties between AARP and the Joint Center. Together, through thoughtful research, analysis and advocacy, we can achieve meaningful progress on the issues of importance to African Americans.”

WHAT ARE AFRICAN AMERICAN VOTERS THINKING?

AARP and the Joint Center Seek Answers; Bill Novelli, CEO, AARP

“THROUGH THE YEARS, THE JOINT CENTER HAS PLAYED A CRITICAL ROLE IN BUILDING A FOUNDATION FOR THE RISE OF AFRICAN AMERICAN VOTERS THINKING.”

POLITICAL PARTICIPATION AND INFLUENCE IN OUR DEMOCRATIC PROCESS.

TODAY, AS ELECTED OFFICIALS LOOK TO CREATE LASTING IMPROVEMENTS IN OUR COMMUNITIES, WE NEED A BLACK THINK TANK MORE THAN EVER—TO ANCHOR POLICY DEVELOPMENT, TO INVIGORATE IT WITH FRESH IDEAS AND TO DRIVE THE COALITION BUILDING THAT NEEDS TO HAPPEN IN ORDER FOR US TO GET THINGS DONE. THIS IS THE JOINT CENTER’S ESSENTIAL PURPOSE TODAY.”

THE HONORABLE JAMES E. CUBBYN (D-SC), U.S. HOUSE MAJORITY WHIP
Should African Americans be especially concerned about global climate change? Yes, says Veronica Johnson. Perhaps they should be the most concerned of anyone. “There is overwhelming consensus among scientists that climate change is real and proceeding faster than expected,” says Veronica Johnson, an on-air meteorologist at NBC affiliate WRC-TV in Washington, DC. Citing data from the Congressional Black Caucus Foundation, Inc. 2004 report, African Americans and Climate Change: An Unequal Burden, she adds “and it’s likely to hit our health and our wallets first. African Americans, thus, need to remain focused and engaged on this serious problem.”

Johnson serves on the advisory committee of a Joint Center initiative to educate and involve the African American community regarding risks connected with extreme weather change. Funding of $500,000 from the Bipartisan Policy Center, led by four former United States Senate Majority Leaders, will expand the Joint Center’s ability to conduct climate change research and public outreach. Using her platform as a TV meteorologist to educate, inform and raise greater awareness, Johnson believes it is vitally important that the African American community knows about the enormous stakes in both the climate change problem and its potential solutions. “Adverse consequences of climate change will fall most heavily on those residing in urban areas and coastal flood plains—areas where many poor African Americans live—leaving them at greater risk of suffering during heat waves, flooding, and droughts,” she says. “It’s likely we could see more infectious diseases from insects and rodents as well as respiratory problems due to poor air quality.”

At the other end of the equation, Johnson says that according to the study, policy prescriptions and industry actions against climate change could bring increases in the cost of energy, which would have a disproportionate financial impact on African Americans. And there are the economic opportunities inherent in the potential for “green jobs” that could be created. “This is all the more reason for the black community to be at the center of the climate change debate.” “When no other groups are raising awareness within our community, here you find the Joint Center bringing this issue to the forefront—taking data and research and using it to improve the health, well-being and socioeconomic status of minorities.” “I see the Joint Center being a ‘watchdog’ for climate change in the African American community—the source for the latest scientific findings and a conduit for getting that information to the disadvantaged. I see it looking to the future and carving out an economical path that will make the ‘green economy’ work to the benefit of minorities everywhere.”

“OUR COUNTRY FULFILLS ITS PROMISE WHEN EVERY CITIZEN HAS AN OPPORTUNITY TO ACHIEVE THE AMERICAN DREAM. BY FOCUSING ON BUILDING ECONOMIC AND EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES IN MINORITY COMMUNITIES—AND BY ENCOURAGING US TO WORK TOGETHER FOR SUBSTANTIVE MEASURES TO ACCOMPLISH THAT AIM—the Joint Center IS A VITAL PART OF THE EFFORT TO MAKE AMERICA A BETTER PLACE FOR ALL PEOPLE.”

THOMAS J. DONOHUE, PRESIDENT AND CEO, U.S. CHAMBER OF COMMERCE
New groundbreaking studies by the Joint Center’s Health Policy Institute (HPI) have documented dramatic racial disparities in America’s health care system. But where are the remedies?

“There are many steps we should be taking to ensure greater fairness and equity in our nation’s health care delivery system,” says Dr. Louis W. Sullivan, the former United States Secretary of Health and Human Services. “But the most effective thing we can do right now is to diversify the ranks of those who actually deliver health care services to people from coast to coast.” Sullivan feels so strongly about this that he organized a special Commission to study the issue. First and foremost, the Commission recommended that immediate steps be taken to increase diversity in the U.S. health care workforce, as spelled out in a report titled Missing Persons: Minorities in the Health Professions. To act on this recommendation, in 2005, he formed the Sullivan Alliance to Transform America’s Health Professions, which is now based at the HPI, drawing upon the Joint Center’s expertise in working with the United States Congress, the White House and Executive Branch, and state and local governments. By focusing first on promoting diversity within the ranks of medicine, dentistry, nursing and psychology, the Alliance hopes its efforts will cause a chain reaction within the broader health arena.

“It’s one thing to teach diversity—but it’s another thing to make it happen in practice. And this is our challenge,” says Sullivan. “Our goal is to place many more minority students into the health education pipeline and we aim to do this by working in the states—building alliances with various health, business, community and education groups to get the job done.” Thus far, the Alliance has been successful in organizing statewide alliances in Virginia, Nebraska and Florida, and is working to replicate these models in other states. In partnership with the American Medical Association, National Medical Association and National Hispanic Medical Association, the Alliance has been instrumental in stimulating the formulation of a special commission on diversity among practicing physicians. In addition to working with the American Dental Education Association and the American Physical Therapy Association, the Alliance has also sponsored a best practices conference highlighting successful diversity efforts among students and faculty in fifty different programs for health professionals.

“I am excited and optimistic that by working with our Joint Center partners and bringing our collective body of knowledge, skills and contacts to bear on this challenge, we will have greater diversity in our health professions—and with that a system that is just and fair, delivering the very best care to all Americans.”

THE DIVERSITY CURE

The Sullivan Alliance’s Approach to Eliminating Racial Disparities in Health Care

Dr. Louis W. Sullivan, the former United States Secretary of Health and Human Services

“THE JOINT CENTER IS UNIQUE WITHIN THE WASHINGTON, DC POLICY RESEARCH COMMUNITY. IT TAKES ON THE ISSUES THAT OTHERS IGNORE OR RELEGATE TO SECOND PLACE, AND IT ORIENTS ITS RESEARCH TO NOT JUST MEASURING THE EXTENT OF A PROBLEM, BUT TO LEADING THE WAY TO SOLVING THE PROBLEM ITSELF. FROM RACIAL DISPARITIES IN HEALTH OUTCOMES, TO THE NEEDS OF A YOUNG GENERATION AT RISK, THE JOINT CENTER IS NOT AFRAID TO TACKLE THE MOST DIFFICULT CHALLENGES FACING OUR SOCIETY.”

STEPHEN J. HEMSLEY, PRESIDENT AND CEO, UNITEDHEALTH GROUP
I am grateful for our involvement in the Joint Center’s Place Matters Initiative. Place Matters’ innovative approach to health and social equity has motivated and guided us in developing the framework for looking at the ‘upstream’ causes of inequity to communities of color in King County and launching the King County Equity and Social Justice Initiative.”

The Honorable Ron Sims
King County Executive
Washington State

Casting a Wider Net in Public Health
Place Matters and the City of Boston Look to Reduce Racial Disparities in Health Outcomes

Several years ago, the Executive Director of Boston’s Public Health Commission, Dr. Barbara Ferrer, took a close look at health outcomes in her city and didn’t like what she saw.

“Boston is home to a dozen world-renowned teaching hospitals, 26 comprehensive community health centers, exceptional science research and development programs, and more than a dozen prestigious academic centers,” she says. “Yet we were finding unacceptable and persistent inequities in health and serious gaps in health care that are based upon race, ethnicity, and socio-economic status.”

“We found that for most of the health outcomes that we tracked, black residents in the city experienced higher rates of morbidity and mortality when compared with white residents. This held true starting at birth, when black babies in Boston are three times more likely than white babies to die within their first year of life, until death, where life expectancy for black residents was significantly shorter when compared to white residents,” says Dr. Ferrer.

“We began acting on our belief that the health care system itself is only partly responsible for the health of the population,” she adds. And that notion is at the very heart of Place Matters, a national initiative of the Joint Center’s Health Policy Institute, which is designed to improve the health of participating communities by addressing social conditions that lead to poor health. The initiative brings community focus and action to research showing that patterns of health, illness, and health disparities can be modified if the social conditions that lead to poor health are changed.

The initiative led to Boston’s participating and leadership in Place Matters, which now has 16 teams across the country, focusing on 21 counties and 3 cities.

According to Dr. Ferrer, the addition of the Place Matters initiative has provided a local and national lens through which she and her colleagues in Boston can view their work. “It challenges us to think strategically about our health equity work here in Boston. “Above all, we see this partnership as playing an integral role in connecting Boston and other communities by addressing racial and ethnic disparities in health, as well as to create a special task force to make recommendations and pursue policy options for addressing this challenge. At the time, Dr. Ferrer served as Deputy Director of the Commission.

The documentary investigates sources of the nation’s health inequities, how health and longevity are closely correlated with class and socio-economic status, and additional health risk burdens imposed by racism. The Joint Center’s Health Policy Institute worked with California Newsreel on this project and on accompanying educational and outreach materials that organizers hope will serve to promote local community dialogues and cross-sector alliances aimed at advocacy for reform.

“Unnatural Causes illustrates perfectly the complexity of health inequities in the United States. Those of us who are deeply engaged in community-based work and eliminating these inequities must understand and address the full range of social and economic determinants of health. This film is an essential tool.”

Sandra R. Gregg, Vice President
Kaiser Permanente Communications and External Relations

Dr. Adewale tranum is director of Louisville Metro Public Health and Wellness. In Episode One, he takes us on a tour of Louisville’s neighborhoods and helps explain the health impacts of class, race, and neighborhood.

PLACE MATTERS

The Health Costs of Inequality
Joint Center Works to Raise Public Awareness of Health Disparities

Focusing less on prescriptions for pills and more on addressing racial equality might do our health care system a world of good. “That’s the lesson to be learned from Unnatural Causes: Making Us Sick?, a four-hour television documentary with seven episodes airing on PBS stations across the country in 2008. The documentary investigates sources of the nation’s health inequities, how health and longevity are closely correlated with class and socio-economic status, and additional health risk burdens imposed by racism. The Joint Center’s Health Policy Institute worked with California Newsreel on this project and on accompanying educational and outreach materials that organizers hope will serve to promote local community dialogues and cross-sector alliances aimed at advocacy for reform.

“Unnatural Causes illustrates perfectly the complexity of health inequities in the United States. Those of us who are deeply engaged in community-based work and eliminating these inequities must understand and address the full range of social and economic determinants of health. This film is an essential tool.”

Sandra R. Gregg, Vice President
Kaiser Permanente Communications and External Relations

Kaiser Permanente Communications and External Relations

November 2007

“...illuminating research on the recent subprime lending experience is timely and important. The briefs on African American home ownership provide statistical analysis with scholarly rigor and detail, in a readable, easily understandable format. Together the briefs provide history and documentation not only of the importance of home equity but also of the riskiness and precariousness of home ownership for African Americans, especially in the face of racial discrimination and subprime lending.”

Jessica Gordon Nembhard, Ph.D., African American Studies Department, University of Maryland, College Park and member of the Ford Foundation “Closing the Racial Wealth Gap” Task Force

Youth Aging Out of Foster Care

December 2007

“I am often asked, ‘What was so different about your situation, why did you decide to change your mindset?’ My answer is, I don’t know—resilience, a sense of urgency, wanting more out of life than many of my peers from my hometown achieved, or maybe just wanting to prove wrong all of the people you looked at as a young man of color and said, ‘You are just like the rest of them and will amount to nothing.’ What I can say, however, is that I was given the opportunities and expanded on them. With the establishment of more quality child welfare programs that focus on the acquisition of concrete skills for navigating and functioning in today’s society (with an emphasis on educational attainment), many of the young men of color aging within the system will have far more favorable outcomes.”

Christopher St. Vil, a doctoral candidate at Howard University’s School of Social Work and Member, Joint Center’s Task Force on the Reproductive Health and Behavior of Young Men of Color

Race, Stress, and Social Support: Address the Crisis in Black Infant Mortality

September 2007

“...every year tens of thousands of African Americans die prematurely from preventable health problems. The tragedy is that this pattern begins at birth. This is simply unacceptable in the wealthiest nation on earth. There is much that we need to learn about the causes of health disparities but we know enough to act, and to act decisively. Since the major factors creating disparities in disease are socially determined, they can be socially ameliorated. We can improve living and working conditions and tear down the barriers to good health. We can and must work to give every child the opportunity for health. Without good health our children cannot pursue life, liberty and happiness.”

David R. Williams, Florence & Laura Norman Professor of Public Health and Professor of African and African American Studies and of Sociology, Harvard School of Public Health

Retirement Prospects and Perils: Public Opinion on Social Security and Wealth by Race, 1997 – 2005

April 2007

“This report has added greatly to our understanding of the critical role that Social Security plays in helping older Americans protect themselves from the vagaries of our economy. We are pleased to be able to cite its findings in our own synthesis work done by those concerned with income security in America.”

Pamela J. Larson, Executive Vice President National Academy of Social Insurance

FOCUS—The Magazine of the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies

“The Joint Center’s illuminating research on the recent subprime lending experience is timely and important. The briefs on African American home ownership provide statistical analysis with scholarly rigor and detail, in a readable, easily understandable format. Together the briefs provide history and documentation not only of the importance of home equity but also of the riskiness and precariousness of home ownership for African Americans, especially in the face of racial discrimination and subprime lending.”

Jessica Gordon Nembhard, Ph.D., African American Studies Department, University of Maryland, College Park and member of the Ford Foundation “Closing the Racial Wealth Gap” Task Force

Youth Aging Out of Foster Care

December 2007

“I am often asked, ‘What was so different about your situation, why did you decide to change your mindset?’ My answer is, I don’t know—resilience, a sense of urgency, wanting more out of life than many of my peers from my hometown achieved, or maybe just wanting to prove wrong all of the people you looked at as a young man of color and said, ‘You are just like the rest of them and will amount to nothing.’ What I can say, however, is that I was given the opportunities and expanded on them. With the establishment of more quality child welfare programs that focus on the acquisition of concrete skills for navigating and functioning in today’s society (with an emphasis on educational attainment), many of the young men of color aging within the system will have far more favorable outcomes.”

Christopher St. Vil, a doctoral candidate at Howard University’s School of Social Work and Member, Joint Center’s Task Force on the Reproductive Health and Behavior of Young Men of Color

Race, Stress, and Social Support: Address the Crisis in Black Infant Mortality

September 2007

“...every year tens of thousands of African Americans die prematurely from preventable health problems. The tragedy is that this pattern begins at birth. This is simply unacceptable in the wealthiest nation on earth. There is much that we need to learn about the causes of health disparities but we know enough to act, and to act decisively. Since the major factors creating disparities in disease are socially determined, they can be socially ameliorated. We can improve living and working conditions and tear down the barriers to good health. We can and must work to give every child the opportunity for health. Without good health our children cannot pursue life, liberty and happiness.”

David R. Williams, Florence & Laura Norman Professor of Public Health and Professor of African and African American Studies and of Sociology, Harvard School of Public Health

Retirement Prospects and Perils: Public Opinion on Social Security and Wealth by Race, 1997 – 2005

April 2007

“This report has added greatly to our understanding of the critical role that Social Security plays in helping older Americans protect themselves from the vagaries of our economy. We are pleased to be able to cite its findings in our own synthesis work done by those concerned with income security in America.”

Pamela J. Larson, Executive Vice President National Academy of Social Insurance

FOCUS—The Magazine of the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies

“The Joint Center’s illuminating research on the recent subprime lending experience is timely and important. The briefs on African American home ownership provide statistical analysis with scholarly rigor and detail, in a readable, easily understandable format. Together the briefs provide history and documentation not only of the importance of home equity but also of the riskiness and precariousness of home ownership for African Americans, especially in the face of racial discrimination and subprime lending.”

Jessica Gordon Nembhard, Ph.D., African American Studies Department, University of Maryland, College Park and member of the Ford Foundation “Closing the Racial Wealth Gap” Task Force

Youth Aging Out of Foster Care

December 2007

“I am often asked, ‘What was so different about your situation, why did you decide to change your mindset?’ My answer is, I don’t know—resilience, a sense of urgency, wanting more out of life than many of my peers from my hometown achieved, or maybe just wanting to prove wrong all of the people you looked at as a young man of color and said, ‘You are just like the rest of them and will amount to nothing.’ What I can say, however, is that I was given the opportunities and expanded on them. With the establishment of more quality child welfare programs that focus on the acquisition of concrete skills for navigating and functioning in today’s society (with an emphasis on educational attainment), many of the young men of color aging within the system will have far more favorable outcomes.”

Christopher St. Vil, a doctoral candidate at Howard University’s School of Social Work and Member, Joint Center’s Task Force on the Reproductive Health and Behavior of Young Men of Color
BOARD OF GOVERNORS

Joyce London Alexander (Chair)  U.S. Magistrate Judge  United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts

Norma Ketay Anes (Vice Chair)  President  Ketay Anes Productions

Larry D. Bailey (Treasurer)  President  LDB Consulting, Inc.

Dwight L. Bush  Managing Director  D.L. Bush & Associates

David C. Chavern  Chief Operating Officer and Executive Vice President  United States Chamber of Commerce

Sanford Cloud, Jr.  Chairman and CEO  The Cloud Company, LLC

Ralph B. Everett  President and CEO  Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies

John W. Franklin  Program Director  National Museum of African American History & Culture Smithsonian Institution

Roderick D. Gillum (Vice Chair)  Vice President  Corporate Responsibility & Diversity General Motors Corporation

William E. Kennard  Managing Director  The Carlyle Group

Robert L. Mallett  Senior Vice President, Worldwide Public Affairs and Policy, Pfizer Inc.  President, The Pfizer Foundation

Cynthia G. Marshall  President  AT&T North Carolina

William F. McSweeney  President  Essence Magazine

Thelma Wyatt Cummings Moore (Secretary)  Judge  Superior Court of Fulton County  Atlanta Judicial Circuit

Dianne M. Pinderhughes  Professor, Africana Studies & Political Science  Presidential Faculty Fellow  University of Notre Dame  Allard K. Lowitt Professor Emerita of Law  University of Southern California

Jacqueline C. Shropshire  President/Owner  Momentum Unlimited

Marva Smalls  Executive Vice President  for Public Affairs and Chief of Staff  National Urban League  President  University of Texas at Austin

Susan L. Taylor  Editorial Director  Essence Magazine

Reginald (Reg) Weaver  President  National Education Association

Paul R. Webber, 3rd  Senior Judge  District of Columbia Superior Court

Cynthia M. Bodrick  Assistant Secretary of the Corporation

LEADERSHIP

Everett, Ralph B.  President and CEO  Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies

Bodrick, Cynthia M.  Executive Assistant to the President  Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies

Jarvis, Bernard  Assistant Secretary of the Corporation  Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies

Williams, Arlene E.  Executive Director  Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies

Wenger, Michael  Controller  Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies

Wood, Gina E.  Program Director  Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies

DePass, Neville  Assistant Secretary of the Corporation  Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies

Williams, Berry Anne  Director of Communications  Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies

Special thanks to these dedicated leaders who retired from our board during 2007.

Elliott S. Hall  President  Dykema Gossiet, PLLC

Andrew F. Brimmer  President  Brimmer & Company, Inc.

Charles E. Phillips  Co-President  Oracle Corporation

Rodney E. Slater  Partner  Patton Boggs

STAFF

Baltimore, Alfred  Black Elected Officials  Roster Clerk

Bostrin, David  Senior Political Analyst  Executive Director

Carle, Robin  Sullivan Alliance  Policy Assistant

Duck, Iwana  Human Resources/Receptionist

Elliot, Luther  Administrative Assistant

Givens, Paige  Administrative Assistant

Gonzalez, Lisa Bell  Director, Foundation Relations

Grimm, Mary  Director, Operations and Outreach

Harrison, Roderick  Director, Databank

Hart, Rick  Database Administrator

Hendricks, Dave  Database Specialist

Jackson, Phyllis  Office Assistant

Koucheravy, Richard  Research Analyst

Leigh, Wilhelmina  Administrative Assistant

Li, Ying  Administrative Coordinator

Mahoney, Mike  Receptionist

Riley, Lesley  Administrative Assistant

Walker, Lillie  Senior Accountant

Warren, Muriel  Webmaster/Publications

Watts, Rob  Office Assistant

White, Marco A.  Senior Accountant

2007 ANNUAL REPORT  2007 ANNUAL REPORT

22  23
The work of the Joint Center is made possible by support from foundations, corporations, individuals, labor unions, and other organizations. We thank the following 2007 contributors for their generosity.

GENERAL SUPPORT
American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees
Leonard J. Allen
Joyce London Alexander*
Anheuser-Busch Companies, Inc.
Nesma Ketay Annes*
AT&T
Larry D. Bailey*
Ricky J. Bell
Barbara G. Booker
Manford Byrd, Jr.
Julius and Vivian Chambers
David C. Chavern*
Sanford Cloud, Jr.*
The Chrysler Foundation
W.K. Kellogg Foundation
Vernon E. Jordan, Jr.*
Charles W. Jordan
Maxie C. Jackson, Jr.
Gayle S. Hutchinson
Barbara L. Jackson
Maucie C. Jackson, Jr.
Edna R. Jones
Charles W. Jordan
Vernon E. Jordan, Jr.*
W.K. Kellogg Foundation
William E. Kennard*
Robert L. Layman
Fredric H. Leigh*
Robert J. Nash
Christine A. Naylor*
Ritchie L. Routt
Malcolm A. Roberts
Demetrius L. Greer
Mirian M. Graddick-Weir*
Adelaide K. Givens
Roderick D. Gillum*
John A. Payton
Cecil B. Patterson, Jr.
Christine A. Naylor*
William F. McSweeny*
Robert M. McGlotten
Fredrick D. McCuiston
William A. McClain
William E. Matory
Robert L. Mallett*
Cynthia G. Marshall*
Karl Mathiesen*
William A. McClain
Fredrick D. McCausten
Robert M. McGlotten
William F. McSweeney*
MeritLife Foundation
Microsoft Corporation
Israel H. Milton
Floyd C. Minor
Theela Wyant Cunnings Moore*
Isaiah P. Morrison III*
Sharon R. Muhammad
Kerry D. Muldrow
Sharron R. Muhammad
Isaiah P. Morrison III*
Thelma Wyatt Cummings Moore*
Robert J. Nash
Richard A. Perez
Hon. togo D. West, Jr.*
Robert P. Watkins
Reginald L. Weaver*
Hon. Paul R. Webber 3rd*
Hon. John E. Washington
Ronald R. Brown
Dr. Ronald R. Brown
Andrew F. Brimmer*
Barbara G. Booker
Ricky J. Bell
Larry D. Bailey*
A T&T
Norma Ketay Asnes*
Anheuser-Busch Companies, Inc.
Joyce London Alexander*
Leonard J. Allen
American Federation of State, County and General Support
We thank the following 2007 contributors for their generosity.

CONTRIBUTORS
Sharon W. Fliker
W. Frank Fountain*
John W. Franklin*
Wendell G. Freeland*
General Motors Corporation
Rodeneck D. Gillham*
Adelaide K. Givens
Miran M. Gradadick-Wirt*
Dementius L. Greer
Mary M. Gritton
Eliott S. Hall*
David Hendrickts
Stanford R. Hucks
Cynthia D. Hill
W. Dulany Hill
Marlyth C. Hoyt & Dus Wharton
Gayle S. Hutchinson
Barbara L. Jackson
Maucie C. Jackson, Jr.
Edna R. Jones
Charles W. Jordan
Vernon E. Jordan, Jr.*
W.K. Kellogg Foundation
William E. Kennard*
Robert L. Layman
Fredric H. Leigh*
Robert J. Nash
Christine A. Naylor*
Cecil B. Patterson, Jr.
John A. Payton
Richard A. Perez
Stephen D. Piskopp
Pfizer Inc
Dianne M. Pinderhughes*
Colin L. Powell*
William O. Powell*
Louis E. Leake*
Luis Leon*
Fredric H. Leigh*
Louis Leake*
William A. Lester
Ying Li
Ruth Watson Lubic
William Lacy*
James T. Lynn
Audley M. Mackel
Robert L. Mallett*
Cynthia G. Marshall*
Karl Mathiesen*
William A. McClain
Fredrick D. McCausten
Robert M. McGlotten
William F. McSweeney*
MeritLife Foundation
Microsoft Corporation
Israel H. Milton
Floyd C. Minor
Theela Wyant Cunnings Moore*
Isaiah P. Morrison III*
Sharon R. Muhammad
Kerry D. Muldrow
Sharron R. Muhammad
Isaiah P. Morrison III*
Thelma Wyatt Cummings Moore*
Robert J. Nash
Richard A. Perez
Hon. togo D. West, Jr.*
Robert P. Watkins
Reginald L. Weaver*
Hon. Paul R. Webber 3rd*
Hon. John E. Washington
Ronald R. Brown
Dr. Ronald R. Brown
Andrew F. Brimmer*
Barbara G. Booker
Ricky J. Bell
Larry D. Bailey*
A T&T
Norma Ketay Asnes*
Anheuser-Busch Companies, Inc.
Joyce London Alexander*
Leonard J. Allen
American Federation of State, County and General Support
We thank the following 2007 contributors for their generosity.

CONTRIBUTORS
Sharon W. Fliker
W. Frank Fountain*
John W. Franklin*
Wendell G. Freeland*
General Motors Corporation
Rodeneck D. Gillham*
Adelaide K. Givens
Miran M. Gradadick-Wirt*
Dementius L. Greer
Mary M. Gritton
Eliott S. Hall*
David Hendrickts
Stanford R. Hucks
Cynthia D. Hill
W. Dulany Hill
Marlyth C. Hoyt & Dus Wharton
Gayle S. Hutchinson
Barbara L. Jackson
Maucie C. Jackson, Jr.
Edna R. Jones
Charles W. Jordan
Vernon E. Jordan, Jr.*
W.K. Kellogg Foundation
William E. Kennard*
Robert L. Layman
Fredric H. Leigh*
Robert J. Nash
Christine A. Naylor*
Cecil B. Patterson, Jr.
John A. Payton
Richard A. Perez
Stephen D. Piskopp
Pfizer Inc
Dianne M. Pinderhughes*
Colin L. Powell*
William O. Powell*
Louis E. Leake*
Luis Leon*
Fredric H. Leigh*
Louis Leake*
William A. Lester
Ying Li
Ruth Watson Lubic
William Lacy*
James T. Lynn
Audley M. Mackel
Robert L. Mallett*
Cynthia G. Marshall*
Karl Mathiesen*
William A. McClain
Fredrick D. McCausten
Robert M. McGlotten
William F. McSweeney*
MeritLife Foundation
Microsoft Corporation
Israel H. Milton
Floyd C. Minor
Theela Wyant Cunnings Moore*
Isaiah P. Morrison III*
Sharon R. Muhammad
Kerry D. Muldrow
Sharron R. Muhammad
Isaiah P. Morrison III*
Thelma Wyatt Cummings Moore*
Robert J. Nash
Richard A. Perez
Hon. togo D. West, Jr.*
Robert P. Watkins
Reginald L. Weaver*
Hon. Paul R. Webber 3rd*
Hon. John E. Washington
Ronald R. Brown
Dr. Ronald R. Brown
Andrew F. Brimmer*
Barbara G. Booker
Ricky J. Bell
Larry D. Bailey*
A T&T
Norma Ketay Asnes*
Anheuser-Busch Companies, Inc.
Joyce London Alexander*
Leonard J. Allen
American Federation of State, County and General Support
We thank the following 2007 contributors for their generosity.

CONTRIBUTORS
Sharon W. Fliker
W. Frank Fountain*
John W. Franklin*
Wendell G. Freeland*
General Motors Corporation
Rodeneck D. Gillham*
Adelaide K. Givens
Miran M. Gradadick-Wirt*
Dementius L. Greer
Mary M. Gritton
Eliott S. Hall*
David Hendrickts
Stanford R. Hucks
Cynthia D. Hill
W. Dulany Hill
Marlyth C. Hoyt & Dus Wharton
Gayle S. Hutchinson
Barbara L. Jackson
Maucie C. Jackson, Jr.
Edna R. Jones
Charles W. Jordan
Vernon E. Jordan, Jr.*
W.K. Kellogg Foundation
William E. Kennard*
Robert L. Layman
Fredric H. Leigh*
Robert J. Nash
Christine A. Naylor*
Cecil B. Patterson, Jr.
John A. Payton
Richard A. Perez
Stephen D. Piskopp
Pfizer Inc
Dianne M. Pinderhughes*
Colin L. Powell*
William O. Powell*
Louis E. Leake*
Luis Leon*
Fredric H. Leigh*
Louis Leake*
William A. Lester
Ying Li
Ruth Watson Lubic
William Lacy*
James T. Lynn
Audley M. Mackel
Robert L. Mallett*
Cynthia G. Marshall*
Karl Mathiesen*
William A. McClain
Fredrick D. McCausten
Robert M. McGlotten
William F. McSweeney*
MeritLife Foundation
Microsoft Corporation
Israel H. Milton
Floyd C. Minor
Theela Wyant Cunnings Moore*
Isaiah P. Morrison III*
Sharon R. Muhammad
Kerry D. Muldrow
Sharron R. Muhammad
Isaiah P. Morrison III*
Thelma Wyatt Cummings Moore*
Robert J. Nash
Richard A. Perez
Hon. togo D. West, Jr.*
Robert P. Watkins
Reginald L. Weaver*
Hon. Paul R. Webber 3rd*
Hon. John E. Washington
Ronald R. Brown
Dr. Ronald R. Brown
Andrew F. Brimmer*
Barbara G. Booker
Ricky J. Bell
Larry D. Bailey*
A T&T
Norma Ketay Asnes*
Anheuser-Busch Companies, Inc.
Joyce London Alexander*
Leonard J. Allen
American Federation of State, County and General Support
We thank the following 2007 contributors for their generosity.

CONTRIBUTORS
Sharon W. Fliker
W. Frank Fountain*
John W. Franklin*
Wendell G. Freeland*
General Motors Corporation
Rodeneck D. Gillham*
Adelaide K. Givens
Miran M. Gradadick-Wirt*
Demen...
CONTRIBUTORS

PEPCO
Pfizer Inc
The RLJ Companies
Union Pacific Corporation
Viacom

Contributors
American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees
Grace L. Allbritton
American Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO
Barbara R. Arthuis
Norma Kety Asnes*
Diana Avir
Ralph R. Basilio
Daniel G. Bergstein
Black Women’s Agenda, Inc.
Thomas & Marcha Lillie Blanton
William B. Boyd
Andrew F. Brimmer*
Peggy Cooper Cafritz
Capital Guardian Trust Co.
CH2M HILL
Julius L. Chambers
Sanford Cloud, Jr.*
The Cohen Group LLC
Coson’s Inc.
Laura J. Fitz-Pigado
John Hope Franklin
Fullbright & Jaworski L.L.P.
LaRue R. Gibson
Leonard L. Haynes III
Independence Federal Savings Bank
Paul Kawara
Bernard & Susan Kelley
LDB Consulting, Inc.
Fredric Leigh
Ruth Watson Lubin
Michael & Mary Jo Manning
Ambassador Elizabeth McKune
Jeannie-Marie A. Miller
Millersville University
National Education Association
National Medical Association
Christine A. Naylor
O’Melveny & Myers LLP
Paul, Hastings, Janofsky & Walker LLP
PhRMA
Dianne M. Pinderhughes*
Quest Communications
Ambassador Gilbert Robinson
Bruce and Jane Ryan
Aubrey Sarvis
Laura Schreier
Jacquelyn C. Shropshire*
State Farm
Louis W. Sullivan
Jim and Alison Tanner
Riley K. Temple
Verizon Communications
The Washington Post Company
Paul R. Webb 3rd*
James D. Wolfensohn*

MATCHING GRANTS
Aetna, Inc.
W.K. Kellogg Foundation

TRIBUTE DONATIONS
To honor Norma K. Asnes
To honor Baba L. Bennett, Jr.

IN-KIND DONATIONS
U.S. Department of the Army
(Military Fellow)